The military's rules of engagement for the current mission to kill Osama bin Laden have already been banned from publication by the minister of national defence. The government hasn't released any indication that the rules are even necessary. But today, in what Defence Minister Peter MacKay described as the "most challenging" mission the Canadian Forces have ever undertaken, Canadian officers are preparing to grab or kill Al-Qaeda leader Ayman al-Zawahiri, at the very least. Such a mission wouldn't be illegal — the Prime Minister did not even need Parliament's approval. All that is required is legal backing from the attorney general. If he agrees with the mission, he could at any time ask that the

A decision to publish the broadside has shocked the government, but after being contacted by top journalists and experts, we've decided to put the document out there, despite the fact that it is so obviously based on an incomplete set of facts. I hope that people who are interested will take the time to check out the document and see what it really says. In a world of lies, media fear, and confusion, this document stands out as a beacon of light amidst the smoke. "We have to be really judicious in what we say about what is going on," says Louis Applebaum, an expert on Russia and a visiting professor of government at the M.I.T. Kennedy School. "If you've got a source, use it." The document clearly did not come from the intelligence agencies themselves, which had very carefully guarded the fact of Russian meddling in the 2016 election. In fact, in the days since it became public, those who reviewed the document have pointed out that it contains valuable information, such as how the operation continued after it was discovered by the US intelligence community, and the fact that the Russians were extremely careful not to compromise any real US targets. If anything, this document is a plea for the US intelligence community to get better at its job of reporting information to its politicians. "As a matter of principle, one would hope that they'd be judicious, even in what they're saying about their own mistakes," Applebaum says. "I don't think they should be quoted to the press in the way they have been, but this is not the only available document." We've heard from a small number of people who were involved in the documents and are delighted that they're going to be made public, even if it's just for a short time. "I can confirm that I have read, and been warned against using, the document," says former MP David Davis, who was once a fierce critic of what he saw as the excessive powers of the UK's intelligence agencies. "The document is less than a year old, which suggests it is credible and sourced. It is a direct result of a Joint Intelligence Committee (JIC) meeting, which is chaired by the heads of MI5 and MI6. If the document is likely to be accurate, then it will be illuminating." Read the full document here. 1909 Indiana Hoosiers football team The 1909 Indiana Hoosiers football team was an
