The KEYmacro is a great thing to have at your finger tips. Keymacro can run in a web browser or on any desktop system and lets you generate keypresses to perform actions in many different programs. Practical use: Keymacro is a universal keyboard macro recorder, as well as a software recorder. Many programs have macros that are simply a record button and a play button, but you can also run the macro in a web browser, for instance, and it works everywhere that accepts keypresses. Once the macro is recorded, it can be triggered by pressing a single key, and this means that the program can execute many actions simultaneously. You can save the macro to a file for later use. Features: Keymacro has these features: It supports multiple keyboard layouts, such as the English US and the English UK ones. It can be used to generate keypresses in your preferred programming language. You can record a macro in the web browser using your mouse. When the macro is recorded, you can trigger it from any computer using your Keymacro account. You can play a macro in the browser as well. You can create keyboard shortcuts for the macro. The macro will display the selected text when it is triggered. Freetime Software Description: FreeTime is a web-based task manager that allows you to manage your to do lists online. Practical use: Managing to do lists online sounds boring, but FreeTime makes it actually fun. First, when you create a list, you can either do it online or download a file and edit it offline. This means that you can create it with your phone and then update it on the go or on the computer. Another cool feature is the smart lists, which are based on the to do lists you have saved. Once you create a list, the app will learn about the tasks you performed the most. Another cool feature is the drag and drop, which makes it easy to move items from one list to another. This makes it easy to group your lists. Finally, the app also supports to do lists with tags, so you can group your tasks by categories. Main features: FreeTime is a web-based task manager that allows you to manage your to do lists online. It allows you to create a to do list and start working on it online or offline. In the browser, it will automatically detect the most active to do lists and give you recommendations. You can also share your lists with the other 1d6a3396d6

In 2005, Tim Fowers earned a degree in Computer Science from the University of Maryland, but he found it hard to keep a job with that degree. When a friend introduced him to WordPress and its enormous user-base, he decided to pick up a web-hosting account and start blogging. Within a year, he was earning enough from ads and affiliate promotions to quit his job. By the end of 2006, his blog was generating more than $25,000 a year. "When I first started out as a blogger, I never would have guessed that I would be doing it today and earning six-figure dollars a year," says Tim. "WordPress and its community is an amazing place to learn and grow. It's a very special place." Tim is now living the life of a full-time professional blogger, and with over 65 blogs, Tim shares his passion for blogging with the world. His new line of business is a series of products called Better Blogger that teach people the skills they need to earn more money as a blogger.
